"If anything could have added to the general gratification produced by the selection of Mr. Buchanan for the Presidency, it would have been the exceedingly appropriate and satisfactory nomination for the Vice-Presidency. No man of his years occupies at this moment a prouder and more enviable position before the public than Mr. Breckinridge. On his entrance into Congress, a few years ago, as the successor of the immortal Clav in representing the Ashland district, he was subjected from that circumstance to a sharp scrut ny, which resulted, greatly to his honor, in the general conviction of his worthiness to occupy the post which had long been adorned by that great man. Mr. Breckinridge's eulogy on the character of Mr. Clay was as able and effective an address as was ever delivered on the floor of Congress, and was universally admired as one of the most appropriate tributes ever paid to departed greatness. "Though young in years-he is now but about thirty-five-he has already deservedly won many and the analysis of an substances required in medical sprudence, and Materia Medica.

Senator Wilson, after repeatedly declaring that be held himself personally responsible "eisewhere" for what he said in debate, and blustering and boasting of his courage for more than four months, has declined Mr. Brooks' challe .ge. He will defend himself if cornered, and so will a rat, but he thinks fighting a relic of barbarism. He is opposed to it, like Falstaff, from principle. Well, this is just what we expected of the valiant Senator; as he belongs to a class of boasters and poltroons who would rather hire such work done for them than do it themselves. In plain English, the Massachusetts Senator says, I will go into the Senate and slander and abuse and vilify your character as much as I please. If called to account, I will plead my privilege as member of Congress. I am by law exempt from libel suits and civil suits for slander, and I am opposed to dueling. Now help yourself." Perhaps the people of Massachusetts will endorse Mr. Wilson and approve his conduct; but we doubt if even they are so legenerate and pusillianimous as to countenance such

From time immemorial the language of legislators to the public has been, "We cannot be annoyed and vexed with libel suits an explanations for words spoken in debate, and we therefore pass laws or make rules exempting ourselves from the universal law others are subject to for slander; but we are honorable men, and if in the heat of debate we slander you, or you, or you, John Doe and Richard Roe, we will hold ourselves personally responsible to you for damages. We will not skulk under this privilege we make for ouselves, but stand our ground and take the consequences.

In no instance heretofore has any member of Congress refused or skulked as has Senator Wilson, and if he is sustained by his constituents, Massachusetts will have set up a new code and new practice to the whole civilized world-a code which says: "We will have no law to restrain us from slandering and libedling our fellow-men as much as we please. We will call them liars, cowards, debauchees, thieves, pirates, and brigands, if we choose, and no law shall prevent us." Our public men may go to any extent; women and children, old men with grey hairs, and infants in the cradle, may be attacked and slandered, and they shall not be called to account by husbands,

We shall see what the people of the other States say to this new doctrine of spe ial privilege. Meantime, it will have the effect of proving to the Southern people that they have nothing to fear from the Abolitionists, for they won't fight, either in Kansas or Washington - N. Y. Day Book
